Taiwanese singer Fei Yu-Ching brings his Farewell World Tour to Resorts World Genting in April 2019 The concert will be a tribute to Fei's immense five decades-long musical career

Genting Highlands, 25 October 2018 – In September 2018, Taiwanese singing icon Fei Yu-Ching penned a handwritten note, announcing his retirement from show business after five decades in the spotlight. Fans wept, but he will go out with a bang, announcing a multi-country farewell tour. On 12 and 13 April 2019, the Fei Yu-Ching Farewell World Tour Concert 2019 will arrive at the Arena of Stars, Resorts World Genting, offering his Malaysian fans one last chance to see the man and the legend live in concert.

Kicking off in Taipei in February and culminating in Kaohsiung in May 2019, the tour will focus on the full breadth of Fei's illustrious career. It will chart a journey that began in the 1970s, when he rose to fame in Taiwan with his elder brother, television personality Chang Fei. Beginning with theme songs for television shows – some of which became more successful than the shows – Fei's musical repertoire includes famous songs such as A Spray of Plum Blossoms and the Good Night Song. The latter will be very familiar, having been chosen as the ending song of China Television's daily broadcast, leading it to be nicknamed the Closing Shop Song. Along the way, he won multiple awards across multiple decades, and in 2006, he was introduced to a new generation of listeners when he performed a duet with Jay Chou in the song Faraway. And after the stage lights dim for the final time, Fei plans to live a carefree life, enjoying each moment as it comes and tending to his beloved plants.

This will be the final time Malaysian fans will be able to experience Fei Yu-Ching live on stage, so save the date 12 and 13 April 2019 now.
